

Edutainment Program Design

Program Format:

The chosen format for my program is a TV show. Television has the power to reach diverse audiences across Bangladesh, from rural to urban areas. A TV show also enables strong visual storytelling, music, dramatization, and live interviews, making it an effective medium for blending entertainment with education.

Identify the Social Concern(s):

Bangladesh is home to diverse ethnic communities, including the Garo, Chakma, Marma, Mro, Hajong, and Santal. They possess rich traditions, distinct languages, festivals, cuisine, and folk tales. However, many people have limited knowledge about these groups. Consequently, ethnic communities are often marginalized or stereotyped in mainstream society.

The social issues my program aims to tackle include:

- Lack of cultural awareness: Many city youth have a limited understanding of ethnic traditions.
- Stereotyping and marginalization: Indigenous communities are often misjudged through stereotypes rather than valued for their diversity.
- Cultural preservation: Numerous traditions, folk songs, and languages of ethnic groups face the threat of extinction.
- National harmony: Increasing awareness of ethnic diversity can foster inclusivity and mutual respect in Bangladesh.

By addressing these issues, the program seeks to promote unity in diversity and emphasize the importance of respecting all cultures across the country.

Target Audience

The primary target audience of the program will be:

- Urban youth and students – to broaden their worldview and reduce stereotypes.
- General Bangladeshi audiences – to promote national unity and cultural harmony.
- Educators and policymakers – to encourage educational inclusion of ethnic histories.

The program will be designed in such a way that it is both informative and entertaining, ensuring that viewers of all ages, including children and families, can enjoy it together.

Title, Episode Structure, Storyline, Guests, Entertainment, and Educational Takeaway

Title of the Program: “Rongin Bangladesh” (Colorful Bangladesh)

The title reflects the colorful diversity of Bangladesh’s many ethnic groups.

Episode Structure: Each episode will run for 30–40 minutes and will be divided into four segments:

- Cultural Storytelling: Presenting a myth, folktale, or performed narrative from the community under the featured.
- Lifestyle Lens: exploring the traditions, festivals, food, music, and daily routine of the community.
- Voices of the People: Interviews with community members (elders, women, youth, and leaders) to understand their challenges and dreams.
- Interactive Segment: A short quiz or game involving studio participants or online viewers about the community featured in the episode. (Through SMS/PHONE CALL)

Storyline Example (Episode 1 – The Garo Community):

- The episode opens with a dramatized version of a Garo folk tale.
- The camera then shifts to real-life coverage of the Wangala harvest festival, with music and traditional dance.
- The “Lifestyle Lens” shows farming, weaving, and food practices of the Garo community.
- An interview with a Garo youth highlights the challenges of preserving culture in modern times.
- The episode closes with a fun quiz game asking viewers simple questions about Garo traditions.

Guests:

- Members of the ethnic community themselves (elders, cultural performers, youth leaders).
- Occasional experts, such as anthropologists or historians, to provide insights.

Entertainment Aspect:

- Folk stories will be dramatized with actors.
- Festivals, dances, and traditional music will be visually showcased.
- Humor and interactive quizzes will make learning fun.
- Colorful visuals of foods, crafts, and attire will attract viewers.

Educational Takeaway:

By the end of each episode, viewers will:

- Gain knowledge about a new community in Bangladesh.

- Learn to appreciate cultural diversity.
- Understand the struggles and contributions of indigenous peoples.
- Be encouraged to respect and preserve tradition.

Conclusion

The television program "Rongin Bangladesh" will function as a powerful edutainment show by merging theater, music, storytelling, and interactive elements to produce enjoyable and educational content. In addition to providing viewers with vivid festivals, myths, and customs, the program will impart important lessons about diversity appreciation, inclusivity, and cultural preservation.

Through this program, viewers will take pleasure in interesting content while also growing to appreciate Bangladesh's multiethnic identity. The performance will fulfill the actual purpose of edutainment, which is to entertain and educate, in this way.
